We gave an account in our last issue, of an accident at Berea station last Saturday morning, in which President Wheeler, of Baldwin University, was the sole purty to the frigry. Said account was gathered from the statements of a gentleman, a passenger on the Sandusky train, but, it seems it was not wholly reliable. Passing through Berea yesterday morning, we asked an intelligent gentleman, who witnessed the scene, to send a written statement of the accident, and he has kindly furnished the

The Northern mail, or Sandusky passenger train, going to Gleveland, is due here train is a few moments late meet at this station, as was the case last Saturday morning. The northern mail had just stopped as the Chicago express was coming up at very slow rate to the platform. The passengers going to Cleveland have to cross the track of the Chicago road in order to get on board the Sandusky train. There were, on the agent of the C. C. & C., and the C. & T. Railroed Companies, was standing on the platform, urging the passengers to stand back and not attempt to cross the track until the express had started, as the Sandusky train would wait for them. His over, a young man who was near, took held of the President, and urged him not to cross the track. Notwithstanding all the warnings and exertions of these persons, he stepped down upon the track when the engine of the express train was within twenty feet of him. He looked up, saw it, hesitated an instant or two, and then stoop ed down when the engine struck him and knocked him over against the platform. His forebead struck the edge of it, and the blow resulted in cutting his head badly and breaking his collar bone. Two or three of the cars struck him afterwards as be was partly hanging on the platform. He quickly fell down beside or partially under the platform where the coaches could not hit him. The train stopped very soon, when the agent, assisted by several nen, took the President and removed him to the freight room, where he was quickly restored to conscious ness by applications of cold water and camphor. Doctors McBride, McCullough and Allen were soon on the spot, and sa-had been going atordinary speed, he must inevitably have been killed.

There cannot possibly be any blame attached to the C. & T. Railroad company, or their employees, as they used every means, except physical compulsion, to pre-rent the President from vonturing upon the track. Yours, &c., X.

The accident detained the regiment so that the train did not arrive until 1:30 P. M. The bank was lined with people every age and condition, and the area around the Union depot was comfortably full of men and omes, young and old, who had gone down give the boys a generous and wermhearted welcome home.

Presently the train hove in sight, its long ngth black with human beings who lined the tops of the freight cars and crowded the wide open doors. As it came in slowly there was -pot a prolonged about -not wolsy after volley of cheers-but an auxious ering on either part for the faces o. riends. Sisters were there to see brothers, children to see fathers, parents to see their boys, sweethearts and wives to see their ows, and the soldiers were as eager to catch eight of the folks from home. And so the rowds whom a critical observer might have upposed had gathered to welcome with shouts the returning heroes, proved as quiet

The General received it in characteristic style, and put it over his head amid the shouts of

At this point Mr. Pickands claimed the ttention of all, and delivered a very apropriate welcome address. He welcomed he brave boys in the name of the city, and declared this reception but an imperfect foretaste of the hearty welcome they were soon to receive at home. He spoke feelingly of the glorious campaigns through which they had served, and told how the memory of the same would abide in the hearts of all. General Schofield, under whom they had last served, had fully justified in his splendid services the estimate which President Lincoln had made .-But when he spoke the name of General Cox, and declared him the next Governor of Ohio, such a cheer rose from all the boys as has not shook the foliage of the Park these years past. And as for General Jack Casement, he has covered himself all over with glory. [Laughter and cheers.] He declared that the soldiers had left the bayonet to grasp the ballot; that as with the former they had rescued the government, with the latter they must sustain and maintain it, and must hereafter be the element in our system to hold the balance of power between the parties.
